Natural Spa Factory launches Clean Living vegan treatments

Inspired by the vegan food movement, Clean Living is Natural Spa Factory's latest collection of treatments and products.

Placing ethics, seasonality and conscious food at the core of its business, the brand is keen to remind customers to be aware of what they eat as well as what they use on their skin.

With this in mind, the company has launched a vegan-centric treatment menu for the spa market that includes 'Raw Cocoa, Coconut & Coffee Calm & Cure', a skin-refining treatment, based on superfood trends, which uses the new product Colombian Buff. There She Glows is a complexion boosting facial to energise skin using a synthesis of rice bran, alpine plants, damascus rose oil and bergamot.

"We launched these treatments as we regularly get asked for products that are suitable for vegan use," explains Emma Webber, co-founder of Natural Spa Factory. "We discovered many of our products didn't use animal bi-products and naturally weren't tested on animals, and with the demand for a 'clean living' lifestyle, this seemed an appropriate progression."

Goodbye glycation

Biologique Recherche has addressed the ageing effects of glycation with Sérum A-Glyca. Designed to maintain the integrity of elastin and collagen fibres, and prevent the production of advanced glycation end products, it combats the effects of fatigue, improving skin elasticity and radiance.

Mimosa Albizia Julibrissin Extract protects the elastin and collagen fibres susceptible to damage from glycation, while carbinine traps glucose to release collagen and elastin during the glycation process.

Preventing these fibres from solidifying helps to reduce wrinkles and fine lines.
